1. Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a prosthetic component for a hand and, more particularly, to a prosthetic component configured for grasping and holding objects, such as utensils and containers, in the hand.

2. Description of the Related Art People who have lost a hand or the use of one of their hands are often restricted in the activities that they can perform and the objects that they can hold. Such individuals often rely on devices known as “prosthetic hands” to help them carry out these activities and to handle objects. The prosthetic hand may be a mechanical, electrical, or pneumatic device configured to act like a human hand. Typically, prosthetic hands are configured to grasp and hold objects using various methods, including electrical motors, pneumatic pumps, or robotic motors. The grasp of the prosthetic hand around an object may be accomplished by a non-rotating grasp mechanism, or by a grasp mechanism that can be rotated. Depending on the object being grasped, the grasp mechanism may be open or closed. For example, when holding a glass, the grasp of the prosthetic hand may be open, so that the glass can be placed in the hand, or closed, so that the glass can be gripped and lifted. When using a prosthetic hand to hold and grasp an object, it is desirable that the grasp be steady, so that the object does not slide out of the hand. If the grasp is unstable, the object may slip out of the prosthetic hand and drop to the floor. Thus, there is a need for a grasp mechanism that is sufficiently strong to hold an object, such as a glass or a cup, that is steady and secure when held in a prosthetic hand.

Leslie T. Smith Leslie Thomas Smith (1917–1998) was a British arts administrator and promoter, who worked with composer Benjamin Britten. He was one of the original co-founders of the Aldeburgh Festival in England and a long-time supporter of the English National Opera. He edited the journals Notes, The Listener and The Times Literary Supplement. Early life Born in Chester, England, Smith went to boarding school at University College School, then on to Wadham College, Oxford. During the Second World War he served in the Royal Naval Volunteer Reserve in the Middle East. Career His first job was as music critic for the Times Literary Supplement (TLS). He then worked for The Daily Telegraph, and from 1952 to 1954 was secretary to Sir Peter Maxwell Davies. He was secretary and then general manager of the Aldeburgh Festival from 1962 to 1986. He became musical adviser and associate producer of Benjamin Britten's Snape Maltings production of The Turn of the Screw, with Rufus Wainwright. He helped Britten and his wife, Peter Pears, move back to Aldeburgh from Snape in 1964. His edition of Aldeburgh's life under the old festival's directorship, which also included programmes of Britten and Pears's work, Britten's music and film scores, and original libretti, brought him into close contact with the composer, and he had much to do with Britten's music in the 1960s. In the 1970s he edited Britten's War Requiem. He later worked for The Times Literary Supplement, now The Times, edited Notes, a monthly magazine for music, from 1974 to 1977, and from 1979 to 1983 was managing editor of The Times. He was a trustee of the Britten-Pears Foundation from 1961 to 1984, and was the editor of the Archive of the
