The year: 848 BC The kingdom: Sparta The main hero: Leonidas The main villain: Xerxes A new rival comes in the form of a great monstrous beast; The Time Monster! Explore the beautiful but perilous fantasy lands of the Time Monster and familiarize yourself with the inner-workings of the RPG Maker Series! - Read More Customer Reviews Rated 5 / 5 stars2010-02-03 10:11:50 Just Fun I'm in a jubilant mood as I go through this game because of two things. First is that there is a very blatant reference to the Ace Attorney series. Second, I was able to solve all the puzzles without any outside help - awesome! The character designs have a very feel to them, the music, same. The graphics are very beautiful and it's hard to put down until the last puzzle of the chapter is finally completed. 10/10 Rated 5 / 5 stars2010-02-03 10:10:01 Awesome Wow, this game is great! This game reminds me of Crime and Punishment so I just know that if you're looking for a classic-style RPG Maker game, this is just for you. The characters in this game are very interesting, and I really like the way that the animation of each character looks, but I think that it's not entirely that good, in that the movement of the characters look very unnatural, but that's a very small detail. The music is very relaxing and I think that the style of music adds a lot to the atmosphere of the game. Also, I like how the two main characters are first-person view, and it adds a different feeling to the game as well. I give this a 10/10, and I would definitely recommend it to anyone who is into RPG Maker. Rated 5 / 5 stars2010-01-11 00:33:19 Rated 5 / 5 stars2010-01-11 00:32:45 Totally great! This was a very fun game. The puzzles were very easy, which is a plus. The character designs were awesome, since almost all of them are from a very different period of time. Some of the monsters and demons, as well as a couple of the background areas, were quite detailed. Some of the music sounded like there were synthesizers involved, which is good, as it was very relaxing. The puzzle solving was what c9d1549cdd

HappyBlock (H1) HappyBlock 1 features two modes:

The city of Apopya was little more than a large merchant outpost. The warehouses and cargo barges which lined its docks were at the end of a trade route taken well out into the northern territory for hardy grasslands and badlands. It was in the disputed area between the cogs and the Smalls, the Awbutmoth and the Pertroids, and consequently was the preferred transit point for both tribes. Apopya was trade, and trade was rare. Despite its location, the city did not thrive on trade with either. The closest the city came to a common culture was the mystical strand of the Dixie Rebs, Northern Parsis and a few tribal fringe families. No one in Apopya had ever considered what the Dixie Rebs believed so strong: beauty or magic. The population assumed that it was a combination of the two. The city of Apopya was much more of a merchant outpost than it was a city. Hidden on the docks behind a lockable service door, a small number of families were in charge of the city. The families consisted of heads of household, merchants, shopkeepers, and those that were talented enough as a messenger, sailor, scribe, or laborer. An outsider might have thought the people of Apopya lived a rough existence, but there were few that could truly fault them. The city was close to a full 50% a number of the population did not have space to live there at all, and those that did were encouraged to leave after their firstborn. Or, at least, that was the story. Years before, they had been as relatives. The people of Apopya were devoted to their predecessors. There was one group that disagreed and, under other circumstances, that group might have prevailed… A Populous Peculiar There were only 10 months of summer and 9 months of winter. The rest, the blizzard months, were spent in the middle. The Jorns were the middle of everything. The entire North and the entire South met in the misty Jorn and, for one season, they caught all trade. This was the time of year they were lucky. The snow followed after the ice age was on. With the summer was when the ice began to thicken. It made for a winter to be passed in which you could forget everything for miles and never hear the sound of anything, not even a barge. The pattern was simple enough

Q: Joining two IDs on multiple tables I have been googling a way to join two entities in two tables to produce something like this: My current query seems to be close but is missing some important parts. I understand it needs to use some wildcard characters (?) for the last 2 parts of the row for the ID#, but I'm unable to figure out how to link them all together in a final query. Can anyone help me out? select distinct emp.FirstName, emp.LastName, emp.ID, emp.City, cat.Name as Cat, emp.Status, sp.Value as Sp1, sp.Value as Sp2 from Employee emp, Employee.Department ed, Employee.CityCat tc, Employee.Position cat, Position status, SalarySpan sp inner join Category ct on ed.CategoryID = ct.ID inner join Employee.City @c on @c
